Possible strike may result

AFT protests budget cuts

by Phillip V. Karali

"Higher education is in the worst position in the decade," Marcoantonio Lacatena, president of the NJ American Federation of Teachers (AFT), said. "Colleges are in bad shape."

Lacatena, a professor in the math and computer science department at MSC, addressed a meeting of the AFT and SGA representatives from the state colleges on March 17 at Kean College. He warned that there may be a teacher's strike to protest the recent budget cuts proposed for higher education by the Reagan administration.

Lacatena stressed that the National Direct Student Loan will be phased out by 1985, and that applicants to the Garden State Loan program would have a $30,000 parent income limit. A proposal to work with the AFL-CIO on organizing a voter registration drive for college students to form a political force was discussed, emphasizing that 90,000 students attend state colleges. Lacatena expressed concern that support services have dropped in the past few years, bringing down the level of education.

AFT opposes proposal

Lacatena expressed dissatisfaction with a proposal made by the NJ chancellor of higher education, T. Edward Hollander. The proposal is for a $20 million supplement to the current state higher education budget, of which $12 million would go to the Tuition Aid Grant program. He warned that the only place Hollander will be able to get the money is through tuition and stated, "We will not support the $20 million program; it is a ripoff."

The hour and a half long meeting was attended by Don Silberman, president of the AFT at Jersey City State College (JCSC); Rick Stone and Glenn Thatcher, professors and members of the Kean AFT; Barbara Hoerner, staff representative of the AFT; Denise Zambardini, president of Student Government Organization at Jersey City State College; and SGA representatives.

Vote to strike

The AFT will vote on April 6 whether to go on strike. Asked about a pending strike, Lacatena said, "We're considering it, and unfortunately, (salary) negotiating time runs parallel with the budget cuts." He added that he would like to keep that issue separate from the higher education cuts.

A tentative date of the week of April 20 was targeted for a teach-in and voter registration drive on all state college campuses.

Silberman, JCSC AFT president, announced that a teach-in has been set for March 23 on their campus. A teach-in would inform students and faculty about union matters and education.

A meeting will take place of the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) at JCSC on Sunday at noon on the third floor of the Student Union building to discuss various proposals. Lacatena will address the meeting. He added that "There is a need for the students and teachers to get together and fight the budget cuts."

Catch the spirit

You've seen the ads--"The Spirit is coming, the spirit is coming." Well, as of this Monday, the Spirit will be here.

The SGA sponsored Spirit Week because they decided during the SGA leadership conference in September that "This would be the year of attempting to increase student participation," Sonjui Lal, director of public relations for the SGA, said.

Lal said the SGA was hoping for a larger voter turnout, as well as getting more students involved at MSC.

Every Class I Organization has scheduled special events as their contribution to Spirit Week including:

The Black Student Cooperative Union, in cooperation with the Office of Affirmative Action, will sponsor a memorial service for the slain children in Atlanta and their families.

The Council of International and National Affairs will be featuring And Justice For All, and will have Peter Lance, the producer of 20/20, the news magazine of ABC, as a guest lecturer.

Budweiser Night will be this Tuesday in the Rathskellar. Each person will receive one free beer.

The College Life Union Board will host Cabaret Night in the Ballrooms. The night will include beer and wine.

APO will be having a comedy film festival next Friday night featuring some Marx brothers and W.C. Fields films. The money made by the evening will benefit the APO orphan.

Even the candy vending machines are participating in Spirit Week. Specially marked candy packages will be in the machines and may be cashed in to Food Services, located in the cafeteria. One specially marked candy package can bring you five bars in return.

"The whole point of Spirit Week is to get students who would not normally attend events on campus to get into the spirit of going to MSC. Hopefully more students will begin to enjoy the programing which is available to them," Lal said.

Ron Naples, vice president of welfare and internal affairs, getting into a little pre-Spirit week spirit. Carry on Ron!

Players presents Inches

The general humanities department, along with Players of SGA, will be sponsoring A Little Touch of Williams in the Night, a one-man show starring Duncan Inches. The performance will be Thur., March 25 at 8 pm in the Studio Theatre, Speech Building. Admission is free.

Inches, of The Commonwealth Shakespeare Co., will portray William Shakespeare. Inches bears a remarkable resemblance to the classic master of drama. He has performed his show in high schools and colleges throughout the US.

Inches, in addition to the performance Thursday, will be conducting a Shakespearean Acting Workshop in the Studio Theatre, Wed., March 25, at 7 pm. This is a special opportunity to acting majors who have had no previous Shakespearean Acting classes offered. Of course, all majors are welcome, and admission is free.

Inches has also been asked to appear as a guest lecturer in several English classes Wednesday and Thursday.

Grade inflation fought

WAYNE, March 16--The administration at William Paterson College (WPC) has begun a war on grade inflation, according to Joe Swartz, an editor of the Beacon, WPC's newspaper. Concerned about the large number of high grades being given out, the college has called for faculty to reexamine their grading standards, Swartz said.

Fifty-five percent of last year's graduating class got an A or B average, and 20 percent of them graduated cum laude, Swartz said. Overall 49.6 percent of the student body has an A average and 38.4 percent have B averages. Swartz added that grades of C or below are "rare."

According to Swartz, Seymour Hyman, WPC's president, said that the inflated grades have "worked to destroy the academic credibility of the college." Arnold Speert, vice president of academic affairs, was also quoted as saying that grade inflation is becoming a national problem, not only restricted to WPC. Speert reportedly told the Beacon that he felt that WPC has gotten "sloppy" with its grading standards.

Possibly as a result of this, Swartz said WPC's theater department has adopted a new facet to its grading policy. Two late arrivals to class will soon be counted as an absence, and a total of three absences will result in a student's grade being lowered one point, Swartz said. He pointed out that this new system has only been adopted by the theater department.

Student shoots self

BLOOMFIELD, March 12--Patrolman Thomas Rovito, a rookie Weehawken policeman, is being charged by Bloomfield police with aggravated manslaughter, unlawful transfer of a fire arm, and possession of a fire arm for unlawful purposes, according to an article in the Jersey Journal newspaper last week.

The Journal said that when the Bloomfield police arrived at Bloomfield College they found Jose A. Gonzales, a Bloomfield student, dead of one "self inflicted" gunshot wound to the head. Police chief, Anthony J. Castagno said that Rovito's gun was the weapon used.

The article stated, that according to Weehawken police authorities, Rovito and Gonzales may have been playing Russian Roulette.

Racial problems discussed

MADISON, March 18--Sixteen club leaders gathered for lunch to start working toward a better understanding of the problems faced by the growing separation between white students and black students, according to The Metro, Fairleigh Dickinson University's paper.

The paper cited an example of the racial problem in that white and black tables have always existed in the cafeteria.

Frank Giraldi, executive editor of The Metro, said the article has evoked a lot of emotion and anger from the administration as well as the students.

Seminar builds rape awareness

by Donna Cullen

Although a rape victim will never be the same person or have the same sense of security again, a rape does not have to permanently damage a person, Dr. Katherine Ellison said at yesterday's seminar, The Sensitive Subject of Rape.

Ellison, a professor in the psychology department and who has also worked with the NY police department rape squad, warned students as potential rape victims, "Don't let this creep ruin your life. Most people have the strength and support from families and friends to come out of it."

According to Ellison, there has been an increase in the number of rape squads since 1972, and a growing awareness of rape and support for its victims. The seminar is evidence of this concern on campus.

Crime prevention officer, Vickie Brown of the campus police organized the seminar to educate MSC students. "I wanted to do something more for our students--not just be their friend but educate them," she said.

There seems to be a growing fear of being raped among MSC women. Kim Verrengio voiced the opinion of many students. "I worry about being raped when I'm walking down a deserted street or parking lot," the political science major said. "Incidents I read in the newspapers and learning of the rape on campus which occurred during the semester break scare me."

Ellison said the average victim is usually in her late teens or early 20's, although she has dealt with victims from two and a half months to 96 years old. The victim is not extraordinarily pretty or seductive, and is usually the same race as her attacker. When not a family member, Ellison said, the average rapist is about the same age, late teens or early 20's. Many women know their rapist. "In Newark, 70 percent of victims and offenders know each other," she said.

The need to feel "big and powerful" through violence and degradation might lead a person to rape, said Ellison. Another excuse is the attitude that "all women really want it and like it, but don't want to say so," she added.

A victim usually feels guilty about the rape and may even feel gratitude toward her attacker for not killing her, Ellison said. "But no one wants to be raped. Even if you give it away, it doesn't mean someone can take it."

Jayne Rich, campus police chief, said rape is always a life threatening situation. "A woman has the right not to resist without feeling guilty." In self defense seminars, Rich has instructed women on how to get away from a would be rapist. She teaches them how to break away when an attacker is choking her or has his arms around her. She encourages women not to fight their rapist, but just to try to get away.

Rich said in certain circumstances women have been able to escape being raped. She said one woman fainted and the attacker ran away. Another woman told her almost-rapist that she had cancer and that he would catch it. Some women have forced themselves to regurgitate to deter a rape.

Campus police officer Debbie Newcombe said the first thing a woman should do if raped on campus is to call the police. A victim should not shower, douche, change or disturb the environment where the rape occurred. She said the victim would be taken to the hospital for a complete physical, and that an investigator would be assigned to the case. She said should the victim decide to prosecute, the investigator would stay with the case right through the trial.

For McCormick it's academic

by Meryl Yourish

Andy McCormick, vice president of academic affairs in the SGA, sees his job as filling a void in the academic aspect of the SGA. His job, he continues, involves taking care of student complaints about professors, being aware of what's going on academically, and communicating that to the students.

McCormick has been working on the General Education Requirements (GER) and the attendance policy, and would like to see a booklet made available that would evaluate professors.

The senior political science major thinks that students are in an excellent position to influence the GER because the All College Curriculum Committee wants more student input. "They're hoping students will reflect on their own experience and give an unbiased opinion on what their GER did for them."

McCormick thinks that the committee has some good ideas, but that there are some problems with the GER. He pointed out that there is a high emphasis on the arts and a lack of any form of business requirements.

"I definitely feel that a business requirement was left out because of administrative problems in the business department," McCormick said, adding, "They're so filled up they're closing the department."

He strongly urges that a business requirement be added. He also felt that a stronger waiver system is necessary.

"I'm going to push for a waiver system, especially since one of the goals of the committee is to make the college attractive to incoming freshmen." He explained that a waiver system would be an incentive especially for those students who took college preparatory courses.

Concerning the attendance policy, McCormick thinks that the present policy of leaving it completely up to the professor is unfair to students. "A lot of students have other obligations, such as work, that become impossible to set aside. Sometimes you just can't get off work in time for class."

He said that he is not against a teacher having a strict attendance policy--he just wants to be sure that the students in the classes are aware of it. One concession McCormick achieved was that the attendance policy must be printed on the course syllabus.

"What I am strongly against," McCormick said, "is a teacher who has an easy attendance policy simply to get people into his class. For instance, passing without having shown up more than a few times."

Another program that McCormick would like to see instituted is the tutorial program that the board of trustees directed each school to develop. McCormick says that the deans of the schools and Irwin Gawley, vice president for academic affairs of the college, are procrastinating on this. "The accounting department has jumped on the idea," McCormick said. "They're using college work study money to pay the student tutors." He said that the success of the accounting department program proves the benefits of the entire tutorial program.

McCormick's pet project, which he would like to see instituted this year, is the creation of a booklet evaluating professors so that students would know which professors are considered the best in their departments. He pointed out that there are a great many problems with this, most notably faculty opposition to being rated.

SGA news

by Karen Meyer

Andy McCormick, vice president of academic affairs, related the all-college curriculum's voting in favor of allowing ROTC on campus. The vote was tied, and the chairman of the curriculum committee made the deciding vote. The proposal will now go to the board of trustees for further consideration.

The SGA was showing its enthusiasm early as it readied itself for Spirit Week. Under the leadership of Ron Naples, vice president of welfare and internal affairs, the legislature was taught MSC's alma mater, and joined in several rounds of "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

Charlee Bannon, SGA legislator on the public relations committee, was signing up other SGA members to help decorate the Student Center this weekend with signs, posters, and the like.

In his report on Spirit Week, Naples said that plans had been finalized for graduation exercises in June. Announcements concerning speakers will be made public when the parties involved have sent in their acceptances.

The Middle East Student Organization (MESO) came up for a Class II Charter. However, the bill to grant this new organization was tabled. The Legislation had questioned whether or not MESO would be a duplication of other clubs on campus, such as the Turkish club, which are already functioning under the SGA. Those in favor of passing the bill cited the apparent lack of activity in the already existing organizations as one of the reasons for granting MESO its charter. Brian Cige, SGA president, assigned Naples to investigate this matter, so the legislators would be better informed of the situation. Consequently, the bill concerning MESO will come up again at a future meeting.

A correction is needed to be made in the schedule for SGA spring elections. The bill which stated the times for petitions to be handed in, campaigning to begin, and actual voting has been amended by the SGA as follows: petitions will be due on Fri., April 24 at noon, and campaigning will begin that same day at 2 pm.

The Spanish club and Montclair Hispano club were granted $250 from unappropriated surplus to help sponsor their upcoming seminar on human rights in El Salvador.

by Eileen Bruck

One of the career fields which is open to students from any academic discipline is sales.

Nearly 6,000,000 workers are in sales occupations, according to figures collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Furthermore, prospects for continued growth seem bright in the decade ahead. However, sales is often largely misunderstood. Consequently many people fail to investigate sales, which offers such a variety of work situations and pay options.

To explain what selling involves, three graduates now in sales, Dan Infanti (BS '76), Ed Mulvey (BA '77), and Virginia Gundersen (MA '77), spoke recently at Is Sales a Career For You?, a program coordinated by Career Services.

Infanti, a business administration graduate with a marketing management major, was hired through the recruitment process at Career Services by Congoleum, a major floor covering manufacturer. Infanti accepted the job, with the understanding he would relocate anywhere in the country. Prior to his getting a territory, he had six weeks of training at Congoleum's corporate headquarters in Kearny.

Gundersen, a teacher for nine years, used the summer recess to seek other options. In August '79 she came to Career Services, spoke to her business friends and generally researched companies and job titles. She decided upon sales, and dispersed 125 resumes to major companies, one being Xerox.

After Xerox turned her down once, she reapplied to another branch of its company. She was hired.

Mulvey, a graduate with a

BA in history, interviewed extensively before joining IBM. He credits his interviewing experience for his ultimate success. Mulvey was initially turned down by the company which finally employed him. He did not take "no" for an answer and reapplied at another branch.

Both graduates urged the audience not to be discouraged by initial rejections, to try again with another branch.

All three, though they sold in dissimilar marketplaces with different products, concurred about the benefits and liabilities of selling. "Sometimes," Gundersen said, "you spend a lot of time with an account and never get the sale." Mulvey countered, "But in sales you can't confuse efforts with results." Overriding this drawback were the positive aspects of selling which included: the ability to make their own hours, the sense of independence they felt, and the fact that their salaries reflected the results they produced.

In conclusion, the presenters made these suggestions for rating a potential sales job:

Clients--Will your client be a corporate manager or the man in the street? How much time would you be expected to spend in the selling process?

Compensation--How will you be paid? What expenses will the company assume?

Characteristics of the product--Do you believe in the product? Do you feel it has a purpose? Does it perform well?

Company--What's the company's reputation in the industry? How will they train you? What career opportunities exist?

Calls--How many would you make in an average day? How many miles apart are they? How much evening and weekend work is required?

editorial

MSC is proud!!!

Recognizing the low morale level at MSC, the SGA is sponsoring a Spirit Week from Mon., March 23 through Sun., March 29. It is between mid term exams and spring break; the prime time for mid semester blues.

With the enthusiastic support of the college community, these seven days should help to alleviate some of the present apathy at MSC and prove to be a memorable and enjoyable time for all.

Many thanks should be extended to all the Class I Organizations for making adjustments in their hectic programming in order to be part of "The Spirit." Through their enthusiastic cooperation, the upcoming week will provide something for everyone.

There will be sports (volleyball and a four and one-half mile run courtesy of the Student Intramural and Leisure Council), dancing, music, beer, wine, movies, poetry, and other forms of arts and entertainment provided. All the events will be held right here on campus, too. Therefore, there is no excuse not to get involved.

Commuters as well as residents are urged to become a part of the spirit. Events will be going on starting at 10 am on some days right through till 1 am the next. So, it cannot be said that you were at MSC at a time when nothing was going on.

The theme of the week, "MSC-We're Talking Proud," should instill in every student a sense of pride in both themselves and their school. MSC's student body has often been accused of being apathetic. Well, now's the chance for everyone to help dispell these accusations.

SILC's 24 hour volleyball marathon kicks off Spirit Week on Fri., March 20 and Sat., March 21. A good turnout here would not only be a great start to a great week ahead, but it would also benefit a worthy cause--the American Cancer Society. From there, the activities and events are countless.

So have a little pride MSC, and help rid yourself of any mid semester misery. The Spirit is here.

Memorial service

The Montclarion wishes to express its heart felt condolences to the family and friends of the 22 slain black children in Atlanta, GA. During the past week, members of the Black Student Cooperative Union (BSCU) and the MSC community have been sponsoring a drive to raise money (through donations) to help fund a special investigative crime committee in Atlanta.

The wearing of green ribbons has come to symbolize the tragedy of these senseless deaths. As you walk around campus, take a look at all the green ribbons you see and ask yourself if there's anyway you can help.

Next Wednesday, a memorial service for the 22 slain black children will be conducted in the Student Center Mall at noon. Sen. Pat Dodd and Rev. Marvin McNickle of Montclair, NJ will be among the day's speakers. We urge all MSC students to attend this service and set an example for others in the college community.

On Second Thought/Meryl Yourish

MSC is the best college...I think

It has come to my attention that I have been neglecting to write about the important issues on campus lately. This may be because there really aren't many important issues to write about (compared with, say, Uncle Walter leaving the CBS Evening News.) However, if I do say that, you can be sure that 10,000 people will approach me, arms waving, probably screaming, telling me about 10,000 important issues I had the nerve to overlook. So I won't say it. Let's just say I've been lazy and leave it at that.

And, in the interests of keeping the peace, here are what I consider to be some of the biggest issues facing the population of MSC.

Have you seen those General Education Requirements (GER)? I can't believe it! What are they trying to do, turn this into a college? Two semesters of language, four credits of math, four of science, not to mention philosophy! Just think about it.

Incoming freshmen in 1982, having just taken three years of language, three of math, two of science, and two of history, will have to start all over again once they get here. I'm just glad that I won't be here to deal with it. There's nothing worse than listening to 2,500 freshmen whine, "They won't let us drink, but they're making us take "Invertebrate Zoology!" I want my mommy. I want to transfer to Kean!"

The International Committee Against Racism has found another cause. I knew it wouldn't be long. After all Reagan won. Can racism be far behind?

Actually, racism doesn't seem to be the problem this time. It's more like militarism. They don't want ROTC on campus. I didn't even know we had them here.

Personally, I don't see what the problem is. If people want to join the army, that's their affair. Some of my best friends are officers. Why can't they find something to protest that's really racist, like the increase in tuition and board fees, or the new GER specifications. Or better still, why don't they look at a calendar. It is the 1980's, you know.

Did you see that article in last week's paper entitled "Rutgers gets a Hardee?" (How did that one get past the censors? Asleep?) I think we should trade in Cuisine Ltd. and get Gino's or McDonald's. Anything would be better than what we're served now, even White Castle. Well, maybe not that.

The increase in housing fees, coupled with the decrease in state and federal aid to colleges and students, is not funny. I know too many people who will not be able to afford to live here, never mind attend, next year. I have a suggestion. Let's rename our new dorm the Montclair Waldorf or the Quarry Hilton. It's obvious that only the nouveau riche will be able to afford to live there.

Another way to cut costs would be to erect a tent city, either in the Student Center Mall or in the Quarry. We might even coin a new phrase--goodbye Hoovervilles, hello Blantontowns! Woodstock a la Montclair.

Last, but certainly not least, you may have been hearing about something called Spirit Week. It's next week, folks. Next week this campus is going to prove that in spite of all our problems, we're proud to be students here. Seriously, I am proud of our school. I may be one of its more vocal critics, but MSC is NJ's best state college and you can't deny it. Of course, I will deny I said that and explain that unknown persons were holding a gun to my head as I was typing, but that doesn't mean it isn't true.

After all, love means never having to say "I love you."

I think.

Student input important

by Andy McCormick

The SGA commends the subcommittee of the Faculty Senate's Academic Affairs Council for its insight and diligence in preparing the preliminary report for a new General Education Requirement (GER). When this report was presented to the SGA legislature at its March 11 meeting, comments on the proposal were generally favorable. The popular opinion was that the high schools neglect many important areas of study; that MSC's current GER allows a student to graduate this college with these same deficiencies.

A great problem with this proposal is immediately evident to the student entering the college who has had a good high school education. For example, a student who has had four years of a foreign language in high school is apt to benefit minimally from the six credit foreign language requirement. Likewise, an incoming psychology major with an advanced calculus background is not likely to need a four credit basic mathematics course. These students, who can be anticipated to be large in number, must be accounted for. It's already a fact that an alarmingly high number of MSC's best academic students leave the college by their sophomore or junior years. The SGA suggests that some sort of waiver system be devised so that the students who possess certain academic skills are not required to repeat these courses. In effect, the students will not be asked to sit restlessly through a course in redundancy.

Many legislators strongly suggested a business requirement be added to the GER. College students should be educated in how to balance a checkbook, or how to do income returns. In addition, a basic knowledge of stocks, bonds, and savings should be incorporated into this course. In a society that is inescapably money oriented, this course is most practical.

The SGA agreed with the proposed current events requirement. Not only would the course spark interest because of the immediate relevancy of the course material, but this course could borrow from any number of disciplines when issues are discussed. The course will stimulate the instructor since the material is constantly changing. It will also call on the student to use and integrate knowledge from the various disciplines.

The SGA will ask the subcommittee to consider these additions to their proposal. The subcommittee is aware that student input is important. Please send any comments on this proposal to me in the SGA Office. I assure you they will be forwarded to the council.

Andy McCormick is the SGA vice president of academic affairs.

Catholic critiques chain letters

by Ken Herbster

A student finds an envelope in the dorm mail box. It contains a blurry Xerox of a poorly written page lettered with misspellings and little or no punctuation.

It begins with an out of context Scripture quotation identified as a "prayer," and then relates how others have said this prayer and realized great good fortune within four days--only if they send out copies to 20 others. "People," the letter says, "all around the world have received money, fantastic job offers, won lotteries, and been the beneficiaries of all sorts of 'good luck.'"

Then comes the wammie! If you break the chain it states, if you do not send out the 20 copies, but throw it away, then you will be visited by such disasters as: loss of job, illness, baldness, death in the family, or most superstitiously threatening--your own funeral.

At least it does not require that money be sent, as in a Ponzitype pyramid scheme, but postage for 20 letters is $3 at present rates--going up soon--and Xerox is $2. Over $5 spent and no one the better for it. Superstition increases, friends and relatives are alienated if it is not done anonymously--as it usually is--nerves are a jangle, and the sender would hope it is a joke, but just in case....

Chain letters appear periodically in our society; they are creatures of brains more tuned to the world of late night TV horror movies or Camelots where Merlins work spells, rather than a reality where, as John Houseman says in that TV commercial for a brokerage house, "They get money the old fashioned way; they earn it."

Prayer is dialog, conversation. It should lead to wholeness, healing, trust, awareness, faith, selfunderstanding. It must not be based on fear, superstition or hope for gain. Chain letters are not prayers. They are devices that chain us to ignorance and spiritual immaturity. Deposit them in the circular file under G for garbage, and forget them.

Father Herbster is the campus minister.

Letter to the editor attacked

To the editor:

Tim McMahon's reflections on El Salvador (The Montclarion, March 12) contain many useful insights, especially his remark that "Now is a good time to reflect on what this struggle...means to the American public." However, McMahon's reference to the assassination of El Salvador Archbishop Oscar Romero by "leftist insurgents" is most unfortunate and inaccurate. Romero was indeed murdered while celebrating mass, but virtually all observers and independent accounts attribute the assassination not to the left, but either to right wing paramilitary squads or to the security agents of the El Salvador military dictatorship.

The reasons for the establishment's hatred of the Archbishop are not difficult to discover. In a country where 74 percent of the children under five years old show signs of malnutrition, where there are fewer than three doctors for every 10,000 inhabitants, where illiteracy is 60 percent in the countryside, and where two percent of the population controls over 60 percent of the cultivatable land, major social reforms have been on the agenda for years.

After the US supported El Salvador, military rejected the results of elections in 1972 and again in 1977; not only guerillas, but increasingly large sections of the Salvadorian peasantry, trade union movement, and Catholic hierarchy, became disillusioned with the continuing failure of any form of social progress. This failure was highlighted in 1979 and 1980 when the civilian-military junta that had promised major reforms, degenerated into yet another police state which has killed more than 13,000 of its citizens in the past 12 months.

On March 23, 1980, during the Sunday mass on the day before his murder, Romero announced that the Catholic Church of El Salvador had chosen the side of justice and reform. In his sermon, he called upon rank and file soldiers in the army to refuse to carry out orders that would result in suppressing the long disenfranchised peasantry. "Remember," he told the worshipers, "that the dead peasants are also your brothers. No soldier has to carry out an order if it goes against his conscience."

Romero's murder was accomplished in 24 hours. I would urge all members of the MSC community who are concerned about the details of Romero's death and the struggle for justice in El Salvador to come to one of the upcoming presentations of the film, Bloody Sunday. This film, produced by the World Council of Churches, and based on photographic and documentary evidence from the French National Television Network and a courageous team of Dutch journalists, provides graphic evidence of the complicity of the El Salvador government itself in the murder of Romero, and explains why every political party in the country has united with the so called "guerillas" in opposition to the military regime.

Bloody Sunday will be shown at MSC on Mon., March 23 at 2 pm in Russ Hall lounge under sponsorship of the sociology club, and again on Mon., April 6 as part of an all day examination of human rights issues in Latin America, about which details will appear shortly. I urge everyone to see this important film.

Squaws prepare for tough season

by Meryl Yourish

The 1981 women's softball team is going to be working under a rather large handicap this year—seven of last year's 15 players have either graduated or are not returning.

According to Coach Marilyn Taigia, however, the new members have a lot of talent. Several of them, she said, were on The Star-Ledger's all-state teams.

All but two of the returning veterans were starters on the 1980 Eastern regional division II champion varsity squad. While Taigia wouldn't make any predictions about whether or not the team will be as successful as last year's, she did cite a "positive outlook."

Although Taigia said that she hasn't really made any final decisions yet (this will be done after the team returns from South Carolina), the following will be the probable lineup.

Pitchers: Val Julien and Ronnie Gudewicz are both returning, but Gudewicz is questionable right now due to a recent operation on her foot. Both pitchers posted an identical 11-3 record. Julien's E.R.A. was 1.55, while Gudewicz's was an amazing .090. Also a possibility at pitcher is Mary Ann Pavlica, one of the few returning JV players. She may be a varsity starter this year.

Third base: Bonnie O'Connor, the leading hitter (.354 last year), will be returning to third this year. Not only did O'Connor lead the team in hitting, she also knocked in four homeruns and tied for the team lead in RBIs.

Second base: Senior Judy Popanice will be repeating her role as last year's pivot in the 6-4-3 double plays. She batted .284 last year and showed a lot of speed on the basepaths.

Shortstop: Robin Krause, last year's leadoff hitter, played excellent defense, and set a new team record in runs scored (24). She drew a team high 19 bases on balls and tied O'Connor for the RBI high with 19. Krause didn't post a high batting average last year (.247), but she can hit with surprising power. She knocked in three homers, second only to O'Connor.

Centerfield: Kim Volanski is being switched to this position from her former rightfielders spot. She was sidelined at the end of last season from a collision in the first game of the national division II tournament in Sacramento, CA. She finished the year with a .276 average.

Sophomores Lisa Baginski and Toni Ziccardi are being mentioned for right and leftfield, respectively. Both were used sparingly last year, primarily as designated hitters. Both can play infield and outfield, but will probably stay in the outfield.

Two freshmen, Helen Rudnicki and Sherri Whidden, are being considered for catcher. Joann Worbetz may be promoted to varsity first baseman, although there are quite a few freshmen, who Taigia and assistant coach Donna Olson will be keeping an eye on.

This season's schedule is also a tough one. The team plays five division I teams during the season, including several doubleheaders. Last year, every regular season loss came during a doubleheader.

"You really can't predict anything," Taigia said. "We have to go game by game."

No matter how you look at it, this season is going to be full of surprises.

Cige rolls

by Bo Delorm

In the women's basketball league, the Infielders came from behind to defeat the Rum Runners, 46-34, in the finals of the competitive division. Beth Malekoff was named MVP with a game high of 15 points. In the noncompetitive division, Palsy's Plus upset the Playgirls, 10-6, in their final game. Yvonne Wood, with a game high six points, was named MVP.

In the bowling league, captain Brian Cige led his Pinheads in a surge which took them from sixth place into a tie for third with Brian's Bunch. Both teams have identical 23-12 records and hope to catch the two leaders, Almo Four and Four and A Half Year Plan, in this week's play.

This weekend SILC will be sponsoring its fourth annual volleyball marathon benefiting the American Cancer Society.

Music will be supplied by WMSC fm and celebrities will be making frequent appearances. Johnny Dark of WNBC am radio will be there to kick off the marathon, Friday about 6 pm. Everyone is welcome to come and participate in this gala event.

COMING EVENTS: Applications for the Rabbit Run will be due on Tue., March 24 at noon. The run will be on Wed., March 25 at 2 pm. Persons interested can sign up the day of the event at 1:30 pm in front of the Student Center.

Applications for the men's and coed softball leagues are available in the SILC Office, fourth floor of the Student Center. They will be due on Wed., April 8 at noon.

Applications for the mixed two-on-two basketball tournament will be available this Monday in the SILC Office.

For more information, call SILC ext. 5245.

Goldschmidt leads Squaws

by Mike Pucciarelli

Last season the Women's lacrosse team sported a 4-4 record in their first year as a varsity squad. This season, with 10 of the 12 starters returning from last year, Coach Jan Biber is optimistically looking ahead to the 1981 season.

Leading the Squaws on offense again, after 38 goals last year, will be senior Roz Goldschmidt. Assisting her will be Diane Nassing who scored 12 goals. Biber feels Goldschmidt and Nassing will be contributing factors to the team's success. A lot will also depend on the performance of the defense.

Returning at the center point position is junior Sue Bird who will play a key role in the Squaws' defense. Helping Bird on defense will be freshman, Stephanie Allen, from Morristown, NJ. She will fill the gap left by Lee Ann Wood who transferred to Trenton State College (TSC).

The Squaws are hoping that they have a .500 record by the cut off date to make the regional tournament. They play their first of six home games at Sprague Field on April 2 against Rutgers. Their schedule becomes increasingly difficult as the season progresses. They play two tough teams in Glassboro State and Kutztown, and later on in the season they face TSC, who was third in the nation last year. MSC lost a close game, 11-9, to TSC at the end of last season.

"Even though we're playing a 13 game schedule this season I feel the team will finish the season with a record of .500 or better," Biber concluded.

A prayer vs St. Peter

Calvin Taylor of MSC prays to the heavens hoping to defeat archrival St. Peter's College (SPC) of Jersey City. The swimmers nipped SPC by one point, finishing fourth in the state championships held at Rider College. Looking on are (left to right) Jim Schmidt, Taylor, Kevin Delaney, and Pete Baldrige.

Bob Fortunato trots out of the batter's box following a single to centerfield during last season's action. The MSC captain hopes to have a repeat of last year's season that saw him named the team's MVP.

A consistent 'Tumor'

by Victor M. Palumbo

Sometimes in an athlete's career, he must go through a period of time when he'll try to perform in a different role than which he normally plays. He may have to excel, whether it is by his choice or not, in an area that he is not best suited for.

Bob Fortunato, third baseman for the MSC varsity squad, was a high school star. In his senior year at Montclair High School, Fortunato was a baseball standout. Playing third and also pitching that year, "Felix," one of many nicknames he's earned at MSC, was named to the New Jersey State High School All-star Team.

Fortunato, now a senior accounting major, chose MSC for more than its reputation as being a fine baseball school. "MSC is the best school around if you want to get a good education and play baseball on a good level of college play," he said at last Thursday's batting practice at the gym.

But in his freshman year at MSC, "Tumor" another one of his nicknames, only came to bat six times due to an injury. In his sophomore year Fortunato got a chance to play regularly. Batting fifth, primarily a power-hitting slot in the line-up, he hit a dismal .256.

"In my sophomore year I was trying to hit home runs," he said. "I was swinging from the heels trying to do something that I couldn't do," Fortunato said as he fielded an errant baseball that fellow teammates Mark Bujnowski, "Half Dollar" Bill Slawinski, and Glen "Preacher" Roe had been using as a soccer ball.

Last year Fortunato was moved up in the batting order by Fred Hill, head varsity baseball coach. Batting second in the order, and cutting down on his swing to hit for average, Fortunato finished the year with a .379 batting average—highest on the Indian squad.

"I changed my batting style and hit the way I knew I could," Fortunato stated. "I didn't go for home runs anymore and swung for a better average," he explained.

"Bobby improved a great deal as a hitter—a contact hitter," Hill said. "He became a more disciplined batter, especially with runners on base, when it counts," he said.

In addition to his .379 batting average, Fortunato drove in 32 runs in 35 games, proof that he was hitting in the clutch. For his excellent year Fortunato was named to the first team of both the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference and New Jersey College all-star teams.

"After coming off a good season, I feel mentally better going into the season this year, than I've felt before in previous seasons," Fortunato said.

Defensively, Fortunato considers himself to be a steady fielder. "I'm not flashy at the hot corner," he said. "I play a good, consistent third. I won't make the great plays that a Graig Nettles makes, but I'll get to most balls hit my way," he continued. "The only time I don't like to play third is when Roe pitches because he throws beach balls to the batters," Fortunato joked.

Fortunato has put the importance of getting drafted in the major league college draft this spring into perspective. "If I don't get drafted, I won't be greatly disappointed," he said. "I'd like very much to try to play major league ball, but it won't be the end of the world if I don't," the resident Montclarion stated.

Fortunato has two goals this year, one for the team and one personal. "I'd like to reach the division III College World Series and have a good year again," he said. "I want to leave MSC being known as a consistent player."

Cosmos get new uniforms

The Cosmos will unveil brand new royal blue uniforms in their North American Soccer League (NASL) season opener in San Jose on Sun., March 29. The game will be shown live on WOR-TV (Channel 9) at 5:30 pm. Nobody Does It Better, a half hour highlight review of the 1980 championship season, will kick off the Cosmos' 1981 TV season at 5 pm.

The Cosmos' homecoming opener at Giants Stadium is scheduled for Sun., April 12 against the Minnesota Kicks at 2:30 pm.

Riche an all-star

Ed Riche, the Indian's leading scorer with a 14 point average, was elected to the NJ State College Athletic Conference (NJSCAC) all-star basketball team. Joining Riche on the first team were Clinton Wheeler of William Paterson College, Steve Selby of Glassboro State College, George Peterson of Jersey City State College, and Bruce Medley of Ramapo College.

Senior captain Fred Hill was named to the third team of the all-star selections.

Worswick to Nationals

Freshman Scott Worswick qualified for the nationals in the 100 yard backstroke with a time of 56.17 during the state swimming meet held at Rider College on March 6 and 7. Worswick was the only men's swimmer to qualify for the nationals to be held March 19-22 in Oberlin, OH.

Blaze's 53 a record

Carol Blazejowski added a new record to her long list of accomplishments when she poured in 53 points, Friday night in the NJ Gems 118-113 come from behind victory over the Minnesota Fillies.

Blaze's total set a club record. It is the highest in the Women's Basketball League this season and second only to Molly Bolin's 55 in the three year history of the league. Blazejowski is leading the league in scoring at a 29.5 clip.

NCAA seal

On Feb., 19, 1981, The Montclarion predicted a possible change in the NCAA logo (left). Last week, the NCAA did introduce a new logo (right).

NCAA adopts new logo

The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) has adopted a new seal, picturing both a man and woman, in conjunction with the inclusion of women throughout the NCAA structure.

The seal was created to acknowledge the passage of the NCAA governance plan, which provided the means for including women's athletic programs within the NCAA.

Ken Burdett of the House of Usher, a Kansas City firm, created the seal, which replaces the original one adopted in 1950.

Ten swim records broken

The MSC swimmers broke 10 MSC school records at the state swimming meet held at Rider College on March 6 and 7.

Even with their fine team performance, MSC could only come up with a fourth place finish, racking up 215 points trailing behind Rider, Monmouth College and Glassboro State College.

Stickmen take a front seat

by Bob Lanza

When MSC lacrosse coach Spence Willard was first informed that The Montclairian was going to do a feature article on the men's lacrosse team he was pleasantly surprised.

"We were told that if we wanted articles in the paper we had to write them ourselves," the fifth year coach noted.

This exemplifies the backseat that lacrosse has had to take to the big three sports: football, basketball, and baseball.

If fans took notice they would discover that lacrosse is one of the best spectator sports around. There is constant movement throughout a game with only two time-outs allowed per half. Also there are no tie scores allowed in lacrosse due to the "sudden death" rule.

With the exception of this rule, which requires teams to play until someone breaks the tie, lacrosse rules are very similar to hockey.

"Lacrosse is a combination of hockey, football, soccer, and tennis," Willard said.

With so many different elements involved lacrosse offers a little something for everyone. The tennis element derives from the use of a netted stick which is used to advance the ball.

"Lacrosse was started by the American Indians," Willard said. "It was picked up in Canada where it has grown to become the national sport. Many people think hockey is the top sport up there, but it's really lacrosse."

Lacrosse is considered by most people to be a very physical sport. But Willard noted that it ranks 16th in injuries among major college sports with football and basketball ranking one and two, respectfully. The reason for this low ranking is the protective equipment that is worn. A helmet, with a full caged face guard, and very thick gloves are among the gear worn in this sport, where a hard rubber ball is passed at speeds of 75 to 100 mph up and down the field.

Lacrosse, being a physical game, forces people to think that only the big, strong players prevail.

"Any type of person can play lacrosse," Willard noted. "Of course if you're quick it helps."

Since Willard started coaching at MSC the Indians have not had a losing season. Last year the team was 9-5. Included in those victories was an impressive win over nationally ranked CW Post.

"We have upgraded our schedule over the years," Willard noted. "On our schedule you'll find teams like Penn State, Roanoke V.A., and Adelphi in NY. These are all nationally ranked schools. We don't call them for games; they call us. No other men's team at MSC plays a tougher schedule than us."

One thing that has helped the lacrosse program at MSC is the astroturf. Now the Indians no longer have to travel to Brookdale Park in Upper Montclair to play their games. This enables students to witness a good brand of lacrosse.

When Willard was asked to name some key players on the squad he went on to mention practically every member on the team. This proves that a few good players do not make a good team. It is a total team effort.

The Indians do have a couple of all-American candidates, with goalie Jerry Buonocore and midfielder Alan Gessel. Buonocore has been the Indians starting goalie for the past three years while Gessel gained first team all-conference honors last year.

Willard seemed to be particularly proud of two freshman players--John Carifi and John Lamela. Lamela, who was 6 foot in high school, has sprouted to an impressive 6 foot 3 inches, 195 pounds.

It's not hard to notice that Willard is proud of the program that he has built here at MSC.

"We give 100 percent when we play," Willard said. "I don't think spectators will be disappointed when they come see us play."

If you can't play, donate anyway

by McKinley Boston

Cancer has easily become one of the most feared diseases of our time. It affects us all: the young, the old, the rich, the poor, and of more immediate concern, our families.

According to governmental reports, if we breathe, smoke, drink milk, water, and now coffee, we increase our chances of falling victim to this dreaded disease.

The Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) decided four years ago to include in their programing a fund raising effort for an unidentified charity. A 24 hour volleyball marathon was chosen as the vehicle by which money would be raised.

Initially, the United Way benefited from the hard work of SILC and the MSC community. The efforts of the past two years, however, have been devoted toward raising funds for the American Cancer Society.

Last year's efforts raised over $4,000 with the participation of over 300 people, the majority being MSC students. This year's monetary goal is $6,000. This goal can be reached if you, the college community, will follow this week's theme--"If you can't play, please donate $1 anyway."

Please assist SILC and the teams playing, in making this year's volleyball marathon the most memorable. The funds being raised will primarily be used for cancer research. Cancer research is expensive but obviously necessary. Let's contribute toward this research by supporting SILC's 24 hour volleyball marathon this weekend.
